Learning Support

What does the Learning Support Department do?

The Learning Support Department in St. Kilian's follows the Department of Education guidelines to support the children in accessing the curriculum and beyond.

We believe in building the confidence and positive school experiences of the children in our care.

We support the class and subject teachers in the classroom to help their students reach their potential.

We work together with parents and teachers to ensure the student is working towards their targets.

Learning support is a very flexible and dynamic system in St. Kilian's. It is guided by the requirements of the students each year and usually consists of a mix of the below styles.

It can range from in class support, where different groups in the class are given small group support, following what is being done in the classroom.

It can involve small groups of students that leave the classroom for a continuous number of weeks or months to work on specific targets.

It can involve students on an individual basis, sometimes supported in the classroom and sometimes given individual support to work on their specific targets.
